

Dr. Kim Bergeron is a Social Innovation Researcher at East Cumberland Lodge located on the Northern Shore of Nova Scotia. She is also an Assistant Professor at Queen's University in the Aging and Health and Rehabilitation Leadership graduate programs. Her interdisciplinary scholarship bridges health geography, social innovation, public health, rehabilitation science, and community-based research, with a focus on healthy ageing, place-based wellbeing, and equity-oriented systems change. Her work emphasizes co-design, knowledge exchange, and policy-relevant research to respond to the lived experiences of older adults, address social injustice, and be an ally to equity-denied communities.

If you have any questions, contact agingincommunity@humber.ca

This webinar is hosted by The Aging in Community Education and Research (ACER) as part of their Humber ACER Innovation and Impact Series. These sessions are designed to showcase innovative approaches to research and community impact, with presenters from diverse areas of aging sharing their expertise and perspectives.